

Job Situation

Working in office setting with long hours at budgeting time, month end and tax time. Work is often solitary

Weekly Hours of Work

37.5

Overtime

As required

Monthly Salary

$4,500

Student Loan – Owing

0

Student Loan – Monthly Payment

0

Duties

Prepare budgets and financial statements
Prepare personal and corporate taxes
Provide support in legal matters

Prospects

Financial advisor
Controller
Treasurer
Banking

Job Title

Accountant

National Occupational Classification (NOC)

1431

Job Description

You couldn't be happier in this job. You're very pleased to be working for such a well-known and respected accounting firm. Your coworkers are always saying how wonderful it is to have you around. They know that you're very dependable and they can always count on you to help them out.

Your job is to do tax preparation and planning for a variety of clients. Taxes can be very overwhelming. The average Joe (or Joanne) doesn't know enough of the complicated rules and laws to do it themselves. This is where you come in. You do people's taxes in a manner that saves them the most money while still being correct.

Sometimes you assigned to work for a large corporation or company. There is much to be done here. You must look through all the paper work and documents to ensure that everything is in order. Any mistakes could lead to a miscalculation in the company budget. Other times you work for individuals who need help managing their property and income taxes. You enjoy both of these scenarios and like that you do something somewhat different every day.

It is very easy to get frustrated in this job. Sometimes the numbers simply aren't working together the way you want them to. You need to persevere and get the job finished. Oftentimes you take a little break to clear your head and when you come back, the solution is immediately more obvious. Every now and then you need to work overtime to get something finished, but for the most part this job fits well with your lifestyle.