

Job Situation

Long hours behind the wheel in all kind weather, traffic and road conditions. Must pack the load and is required to do some lifting and often a lot of stairs in order to be fast.

Weekly Hours of Work

44

Overtime

As required

Monthly Salary

$2,200

Student Loan – Owing

0

Student Loan – Monthly Payment

0

Duties

Operate trucks. Inspect brakes, tires, lights, etc. Make emergency roadside adjustments. Keep records of loads delivered.

Prospects

Retail outlets. Moving companies.
Transport companies. Dry cleaners

Job Title

Delivery Driver

National Occupational Classification (NOC)

7414

Job Description

You have found a job where you get to drive all day long. It is perfect for you because you get to set you own schedule and hours. You know the city like the back of your hand and quickly have all the short cuts and side streets memorized. Your GPS now sits in your glove compartment you rarely need it anymore. Your manager is quite pleased with your ability to work well with so many different people.

Your first drop off is to a downtown tower building and parking is a challenge, causing you a delay. You will have to make up the time somehow, yet know better than to push it too hard and get tickets. Keeping a clear driving record is very difficult yet essential. Driving commercially and having a clean driver abstract is not easy.

Loading your vehicle requires a lot of organization as well. You have planned your route and you need to have each delivery accessible and your hand held computer loaded up with information. So many types of accounts to keep track of, who to bill and the discounts to apply if any.

Your people skills really come in handy. You are able to work well with various security personnel, receptionists as well as shipping and receiving staff. Every delivery is different and you are kept hopping. You have been busy, meeting different people all the time and being alone most of the time. A job just for you.