Role Description

You graduated high school with excellent marks, especially in math and accounting. You always had a very logical and scientific way of thinking about things, which means that math came relatively easy to you. Even when you were younger, you knew that a career using numbers would be right for you.

In elementary school you loved your math homework book. All your classmates regarded it as a chore when pages were assigned, but you couldn't wait to get home and do it! You loved the way that numbers could be used to solve riddles and find the answers to other activities. It was sometimes difficult to get the answers, but you always knew that you could get the answer if you stayed focused and thought outside the box.

In high school you were the student council treasurer. You enjoyed working as part of a team with the other students elected to the council. It was your job to ensure that all of the activities could be appropriately financed. For example, you had to make sure that the student council activities were fun for everyone and had proper decorations while balancing the books for all planned events.

You went away to university to get your Bachelor of Commerce degree. Your professors and teaching assistant were impressed with your initiative and that your work was always done well and on time. You graduated with honours and had job offers from several different companies. Now you just need to decide where you will end up.

You are 22 years old.
