Role Description

You graduated high school with excellent marks in math, especially in data management where you excelled at accounting and bookkeeping. You also enjoyed subjects like biology and Business English. During your high school years you worked for your uncle at his real estate office answering telephones and doing a little book keeping. He was always impressed at how you could keep yourself busy and that you could handle many things at once.

After graduation a neighbor hired you to work in the medical clinic where she worked. She knew that you were a respectful, empathetic person full of optimism, which is what a person really needs to be working in the medical field. You were able to multi-task; greeting patients, organizing patient information, taking orders and communicating with external partners was just a few of the things that you juggled everyday.

Your experience at the clinic motivated you to change your college application from business administration to a medical assistant diploma program. You knew that to be able to do medical transcription that you would have to really apply yourself and excel in your computerized medical terminology course. You did not disappoint, you passed as head of your class. Your work placement term convinced you that you were on the right track and you wanted to get to work right away.

The college that you had graduated from had an excellent placement office and so you decided to take your resume to them. You decided that you wanted to work in an organization that offered promotional opportunities and training opportunities. Right now you are putting all your energy into finding a job.

You are 22 years old and bilingual.
