Role Description

You graduated from high school with average grades in the majority of your subjects, but you were interested in the sciences. Your parents would like you to pursue post secondary education, however you are unsure of what you would like to do in the future. Without a clear idea in mind you are hesitant to enroll in either college or university. You were always considered to be something of a neat freak. Your locker was the cleanest in school, you never had a paper out of place, your hands were washed periodically and teachers were always thankful when you wiped down the boards for them. Your parents never had to remind you to clean your room, in fact they were usually impressed that your storybooks were colour coded and crossed referenced by subject.

After graduation you worked part-time at what you thought to be the cleanest place you could find, the hospital. You were hired as a custodian to keep everything clean and germ free. You really enjoyed the fact that you felt like you were helping people by doing something as small as wiping down a table. You realized through this experience that working with people in a health care setting was ideal for you.

Your parent's wishes came true and you enrolled in your community college and received a certificate as a Sterile Processing Technician. Your marks improved greatly because you found something you were truly interested in. Although you were kept busy with school, your textbooks were always organized by subject.

You are 20 years old.
